

Dyehouse films and RTÉjr are making a new series for young children all about transport and journeys.

We are inviting children from towns and cities all over Ireland to take part in a new series called 'JourneyCam'. We're looking for talkative and curious kids to 'show and tell' all about the journeys they make.

Whether it's scooting or cycling to school, car pooling to a hobby or using public transport to visit relatives – we want the young children of Ireland to show us how they get around using different modes of transport and what adventures they have along the way.

We're interested in seeing, from a child's perspective, all the ordinary (and extraordinary) things to be noticed or experienced in our built environment. We want to know what it's like to get a bus to school, take a taxi somewhere, scoot to the shops or ride on the back of a bicycle. We're curious about all aspects of the urban landscape...cranes on the skyline, canal banks, toll bridges, water towers, zebra crossings and level crossings.

We'd love to hear from parents and guardians of young children, (aged 4 – 8) of all abilities, from towns and cities all over Ireland who can share their own unique take on the world around them.

If you're interested in hearing more about 'JourneyCam', or think your child might like to participate, please use the email below to tell us a little about some of your everyday journeys!
